Friends, parents, and classmates: Tonight we have reached another port on life's broad sea, that of graduation. As we pause for a moment to change ships we want to welcome you who have come to the Wharf of Commencement to greet us as we disembark

For four years we have sailed over the high school waters which were sometimes smooth and at others very turbulent. During this time we have been guided by one of the most efficient crows that over sailed the seas. They have not only guided the course of our ship but have trained each one of us along the lines of our special abilities. When some of us drifted into the wrong channels and it looked as though we would not reach our goal, they would step in and show us our mistakes and advise us to change our course and start again in the right direction. After overcoming many obstacles we have at last reached the goal of our objective.

As we enter the Port of Graduation tonight I want to take this opportunity to thank each and every one who has come here to share the joys of our celebration.

Our program centers around a high school cruise. We shall assume the role of a band of seamen sailing over educational waters and shall give you some of the highlights of our experiences during the past four years as we have tossed up and down on the high school seas.

When we started this cruise in September, 1934 we selected courses of study that would meet our present requirments and prepare us for our future needs. During these years we have passed all the tests that have been given to meet these objectives and tonight we stand at the port of Graduation ready to disembark. I speak for my fellow students when I say your coming here has been an inspiration and we thank you most heartily for your presence.

VALEDICTORIAN'S ADDRESS RALPH DUNAVANT

Friends, teachers, and classmates: Our ship is now ready to anchor and we must soon separate. It has been a happy voyage as we have sailed over many dark and unknown waters. At times we hardly knew which way we were going but we kept pressing forward until our ship has brought us to the goal of our objective, the Port of Graduation.

To you, our kind teachers, we want to take this occasion to thank you for your guidance and worthwhile advice. There have been times when it seemed as though we had struck impassable barriers, but you would come to our rescue and steer us through the narrow channels to safety. As we glide into the larger seas of life, we shall remember the help and encouragement you have given us.

Dear parents and friends, we cannot leave this ship without thanking you for making this voyage possible. Without your leve and sacrifice we would never have launched out four years ago. As we go out into life we shall apply all the fine principles of sailing which we have learned toward helping others who will follow us, thus making your investment in us really worth while.

Now classmates, my final word is to you, We have been shipmates for four long years during which time the bonds of friendship have grown. Let us remember as we separate that whatever we might do later in life we will be guided by the worthwhile principles of honor that have been instilled in us in dear old Stoneville High School. And now as our ship glides slowly into port my wish to all of you is a sincere good night and farewell.

CLASS POEM

Our life has been short though long it may seem Our schooling, and experiences we esteem. It has been many years since we began. Beginning the first grade our races we ran. From the first to the seventh class we have passed.

Years have flown by, we've graduated at last, But just from the seventh grade, understand. We have yet our high school grades to land.

Freshmen we are, obeying others' commands No praising name we get, but "Green Horned Freshmen."

We have studied and toiled for our next grade

No tools did we have, not even a spade.

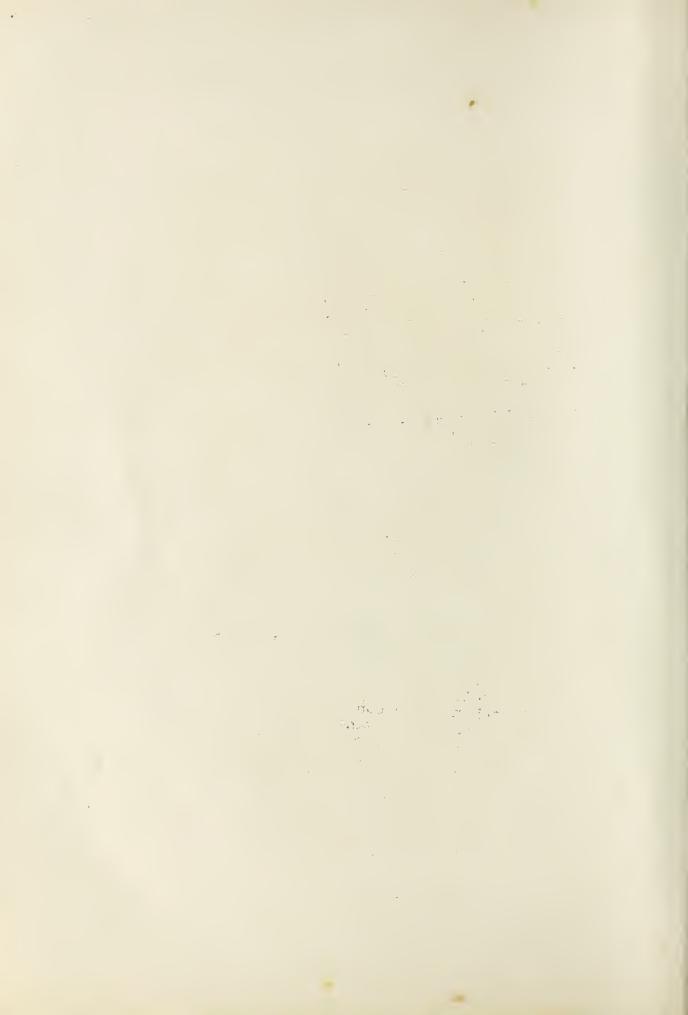

We bounded the ninth grade with lessons prolonged.

No one tried to help us, us sophomores, along. Our lessons wo've learned, ninth grade is o'er. We are ready to land on Junior's shore.

Now on will we sail; our banners raised high.
Our Junior year now we have passed by.
The next year begins; begins with a song.
For we are Seniors who now sail along.
Our banquets and parties are now all o'er,
Hard lessons and exams we have well borne.
We will soon be on our own life's harbor
Stand by, chasmates, and mind your starboard.
--Alma Dean Crews

Sponsored Program

The Junior class sponsored a musical program in the auditorium February 21, 1939, when the Stratton sisters unfolded their talent before those who attended.

An unusual feature of the program was the comedy "Two Timing Han," which was greeted with loud applause.

The proceeds of this performance went to the Junior-Senior fund.

Junior-Senior Banquet

The annual Junior-Senior banquet was held at the Jefferson Roof Restaurant, Greensboro, N. C., March 31, 1939.

All the fair sex were arrayed in evening attire and the boys also were arrayed in their smartest outfits.

The banquet hall was changed into a hugh ocean liner. As the guests arrived they were welcomed by the ship officers, who were given kodak pictures as passports. Soon everyone was finding his place on deck after reading the sign over the entrance which stated: "Peaceful Seas Ahead."

The tables were neatly arranged in blue and white. In the center of each a ship sailed on glassy seas. Flags bearing names of the seniors flew from the ship's masts.

The program and menu were printed in book form with the S. S. Senior Ship on the front.
